

Frequently Asked Questions about the NOAH Arts in Health Professional Test

Last revised July 2, 2022

What is the NOAH Arts in Health Professional test?

The NOAH Arts in Health Professional test is a new online test that will be launched in early 2023. Successful completion of this test will result in your achieving the designation NOAH Arts in Health Professional. This credential documents an individual's knowledge of the entire Core Curriculum for Arts in Health Professionals book publication, and is intended to demonstrate a person's foundational competency in the arts in health field. This credential is intended for artists and administrators who are using the arts to support health and well-being in healthcare facilities and in community settings. Anyone will be able to achieve this credential by successfully completing an online test on the Core Curriculum.

Why should I take this test? What does this credential qualify me to do?

When you successfully complete the online test, you will receive from NOAH a certificate of completion that designates you to be a NOAH Arts in Health Professional. You can list this credential on your resume. You can layer this credential with other academic degrees and professional development programs to develop a highly individualized career trajectory that includes arts in health. Please note, however, that this credential is not equivalent to a professional certification.

Who is eligible to take this test?

Any adult, anywhere in the world! This credential is intended to offer an accessible and inclusive "on ramp" to the arts in health field. We expect this credential to be of interest to visual artists, performing artists, literary artists, healthcare administrators, arts administrators, healthcare architects and designers, art consultants, recreational therapists, creative arts therapists, expressive arts therapists, nurses, physicians, public health professionals, and more.

What will the test look like?

This will be an online, asynchronous, English-language test. As long as you have a strong internet connection, you can take this online test anyplace and anytime. An online proctoring method will be in place for all test-takers.

We expect this to be a three-hour online test that will be divided into three sections of 50 questions each. There will be breaks between the sections. The three sections are identified as Understanding the Arts in Health Field; Designing, Leading, and Managing Arts in Health Programs; and Professional Practice of Artists in Healthcare. The questions will all be in multiple choice or true/false format. The test will assess knowledge, comprehension, and application of the entire Core Curriculum for Arts in Health Professionals. Even for individuals who already have academic degrees and/or extensive professional experience in arts in health, the breadth of the Core Curriculum will require – at minimum – careful study of the entire book before you take the test. The test itself is currently still in development. Additional information will be available by early 2023 to provide detailed guidance for preparing to take the test.

Who created the test, and how do you know it's valid and reliable?

A national group of content-area experts and testing experts (ASC, see below) are working together throughout 2022 to develop the online test to be launched in 2023. A team of three test-question item writers are drafting the questions, all drawn from content in the Core Curriculum for Arts in Health Professionals. Three rounds of content-area expert peer review are set up to revise and refine the questions. The questions will be tested and evaluated in their online test format in fall 2022 to ensure statistical validity. In short, all questions on the test have multiple stages of content development and review for the quality, accuracy, validity, and reliability of the test. The test will be continually monitored after it is launched to ensure its quality.

Who is the testing company?

The testing company is Assessment Systems Corporation (ASC), which has decades of global experience in computerized testing. NOAH contracted ASC to be the external testing company. Consultants from ASC worked closely with NOAH content-area experts to develop the test.

How will I actually go about taking this online test?

NOAH will make detailed information about this registration and test-taking process available to you on the website as of early 2023. In general, you'll register to take the test through a form that NOAH will have online. NOAH will coordinate your test-taking with ASC, and you'll receive a passcode and detailed test-taking instructions. An online proctor will be set up for you. When you're ready to take the test, you'll want to make sure you have three hours set aside in a continuous block of time. You'll log in and take the test at a time that is convenient for you.

What happens when I pass the test?

When you pass the test, you'll receive a packet of information from NOAH that also contains your certificate of completion, designating you to be a NOAH Arts in Health Professional.

What happens if I don't pass the test?

If you don't pass the test, you'll receive helpful information and guidance from NOAH about ways in which you might prepare to take the test again. You are welcome to repeat the test, but you'll need to register to take it again.

How much will it cost to take the test?

NOAH is working with ASC to sort this out, and we'll make this information available to you as soon as possible. In general, however, you should expect the test to cost roughly the same as it would to take a rigorous qualifying/credentialing test through a professional organization in any of the allied health professions.

How can I best prepare for taking the test?

The best thing you can do is review your own academic and professional resources, and carefully read the Core Curriculum for Arts in Health Professionals book. Numerous reference citations are provided throughout this publication, and you may also want to read some of these.

I'm completely new to the Arts in Health field. What are the best ways to be introduced to this professional field so that I can get NOAH Arts in Health Professional credential sometime in the future?

The website of the National Organization for Arts in Health has a number of excellent resources and reference materials linked to its pages. These readings, as well as the Core Curriculum for Arts in Health Professionals, will give you a good introduction to the field. If you're eager to get started with your educational pathway, please take a look at all the links provided to educational programs across the country. We also expect that several sets of introductory educational materials (textbooks and online courses) will be available to you through NOAH in the next few years.

Can I complete this test for Continuing Education Unit (CEU) credits?

This will depend on decisions made by your professional association and your professional certification or license. NOAH will be gradually reaching out to relevant professional associations to make our educational materials available to allied professions for CEUs.
